

British Viewpoint Regarding Foreign Policy Afully Set Out By Miss Alice Johnston

At Banquet Tendered Her By The Grande Prairie Canadian Club On Tuesday Night, Stresses Heavy Responsibility Of Chamberlain After His Government—Contrasts Liberty Under Democracy With Oppressive Measures In Dictator Countries.

"The British Viewpoint Regarding Foreign Affairs" was set forth by Miss Alice Johnston of Brekheimstead, England, lecturer and traveller, at a banquet given by the Grande Prairie Canadian Club in the basement of St. Paul's United Church on Tuesday night, at which Miss Johnston was the guest speaker.

There were upwards of ninety covers and the banquet prepared by the ladies of the church left nothing to be desired.

Norman Swallow, president of the club, in introducing the speaker, said that he was pleased to see so many present. He explained that the club was re-organizing and that this was the third meeting since that took place. It was a real pleasure, observed the speaker, to have Miss Johnston come from the seat of the Empire to this far-flung section of that Empire and to discuss the British point of view.

Mr. Swallow extended best wishes to the ministers and delegates at the meeting of the Presbyterian held in Grande Prairie.

At the outset of her address, Miss Johnston, who is a fine speaker and possessor of a most charming personality, observed that her trans-Canada lecture tour gave her an opportunity to see much of Canada, something she was thankful for.

It was hard, remarked the speaker, to define the British point of view, for the reason that Britain is a democracy under which there is freedom of speech and freedom of the press. That right is exerted by the people to the full.

Continuing, Miss Johnston said that the people of the dictator nations have not had freedom of speech for many years. There has been a great change in Britain since the Great War with regard to foreign policy. It was hard for Britons to have to think in terms of a possible invasion of their country has not been invaded for several centuries.

In referring to the awfulness of a modern war, Miss Johnston stated that even the threat of war causes great disruption in Britain, for the reason that such a war, if it occurs, will enter every home. She explained that as a result of no method to protect babies from fear.

The speaker then referred briefly to the League of Nations, which came into existence following the Great War. Leaders of Britain worked hard to make it function. Certain men, while giving lip loyalty, were really working against the League. Japan invaded China, Italy Ethiopia. These were cases in point. Continuing, the speaker observed that the League was international in scope but gradually became tangled up with nationalism.

Miss Johnston, who has travelled extensively on the continent of Europe, compared the freedom enjoyed by the British with the oppression of the dictator countries.

CANADA'S AMAZING SKIER

One of the most amazing skiers in Canada is undoubtedly one-legged Jean-Yves Gosselin of Quebec City, whose skill and daring on one ski has earned him international fame. A victim of bone tuberculosis at seven, the 20-year-old youth began skiing with one ski and crutches when he was eleven. Today, with adaptability of youth, he can negotiate the difficult slalom course on Mont St. Cassin at Les Deuxmonts with ease, and he shines at downhill sliding. Even gruelling cross-country races find him in the top ranks. In a recent six-mile race he finished only three minutes behind the winner.

Cup Presented To All-Stars, Banquet Held On Sat. Night

Given By Maple Leaf Petroleum Co. And U.F.A. Co-operative In Appreciation Of Quality Hockey Played In North Country—Dunc McAuley, Manager Of All Stars, Received Cup, Which Was Emblematic Of Championship Of North.

A banquet was tendered the All Stars of North of the Peace and the Red Devils and several of their friends in the dining-room of the Grande Prairie Hotel on Saturday night, following the hockey game, by the Maple Leaf Petroleum Company and the U.F.A. Co-operative.

Following partaking of the wonderful spread, Mr. Macklin, representing the U.F.A. Co-operative, called upon W. B. Macklin, representing the U.F.A. Co-operative, on behalf of his organization extended congratulations to the players and wished that the game was a good one to win and a hard one to lose.

Mr. Macklin, representing the cup, donated by both companies, referred to the pleasure given to the people in the country by the broadcast of the games—a much larger audience than the big crowd that had attended the game in the past.

Mr. Macklin further said that he noticed that in hockey there was great cooperation. The U.F.A. and the Maple Leaf Petroleum Company find that cooperation is necessary in business. He stated that the cup was donated in appreciation of the good clean sport in the north country.

P. J. Tooley, who was the next speaker, on behalf of the Carnival committee said that both teams were made up of very fine players. The All Stars coming all the way from north of the Peace, he said, showed very fine sportsmanship, as did their supporters who made the trip by plane. Thanks were then addressed to the companies for the beautiful cup.

Harold Oxley, manager of the Red Devils, thanked the visitors for coming to the tournament and making the game such a success. He said, in his opinion the better team won.

Mr. McAuley, manager of the All Stars, was called to the front to receive the cup, which is emblematic of the hockey championship of the Peace River. In his brief reply Mr. McAuley said that he was glad to come over with his boys, who acted like gentlemen. "It was a great game and we were lucky to win," remarked the All Stars manager.

LETTER MAKES FAST TIME To illustrate at what speed things are travelling nowadays, J. B. Oliver received a letter from Vancouver, which was posted at 8:30 p.m. on March 5 and arrived at Grande Prairie March 7. The letter was carried by the Trans-Canada Air Line to Edmonton and from there by plane to Grande Prairie.

"Dopey" Presented To Harold Oxley Mgr. Red Devils

When "Dopey" one of Snow White's dwarfs, was placed before "Ferdinand the Bull" the Red Devils mascot, the mascot was named "Dopey".

Here is the story: A report was sent out that "Ferdinand the Bull" had mysteriously disappeared. Grasping the situation, L. W. Saunders of McLennan, better known as "Sandy", made the trip by plane, brought with him "Dopey" to replace "Ferdie", and the mascot "Ferdie" was found, but this did not deter at all from placing "Dopey" alongside "Ferdie" as a place of honor in the centre of the rink.

That is not all. Next day "Sandy" presented a letter to the manager of the Red Devils, with "Dopey". Needless to say Harold was a happy man. "Our mascot doesn't seem to be bad now," remarked Harold, who carried "Dopey" as a fond mother would fondle her child.

All-Star Fans Air Minded As Well As Hockey Minded

That several supporters of the All Stars hockey team, who tangled with the Red Devils on Saturday night, are air-minded as well as hockey-minded was demonstrated on Saturday when three plane-loads of them arrived at Grande Prairie, two from Prince Rupert and one from Edmonton, to witness the hectic struggle.

In the plane piloted by Ernie Kubicke, who was accompanied by Henry Jerry, Tony Trelick, Ken Crummy and Earl Boyd, the Red Devils were seen to be cheering the All Stars on to victory.

Outskated Rangers Go Down To Defeat Before All-Stars

Outskated, the Sixsmith-Clairmont Rangers went down to defeat before the All Stars of North of the Peace at the Wapiti rink on Saturday night on Friday night by 3-1.

The Rangers held the All Stars in the first period, but the All Stars looked as though they had a chance to win in the second period. The Rangers scored by working puck in from behind.

All such hopes were blasted in the second period, when the All Stars scored on the power and scored four goals. Spotswood scored on an assist by Jack Carley, and the All Stars next bulged the help on a pass from McAuley; Jim Galbraith counted on the power and scored.

With the tide turning against them, the Rangers staged an attack from the whistle in the final period which promised results. Lee Boyd, who was the goalie, was both. Neither team had a decided advantage for some time. Finally Spotswood broke away and scored. A few seconds before time Buster Brown of the Rangers scored unassisted.

All Stars—Goal, Lee Boyd; defense, Ed McAuley, Jim Galbraith, Glen Kirkland, Buster Matthews; forwards, Harry Spotswood, Jack Carley, W. Perry, Billy Hopps.

Rangers—Goal, Fred Anderson; defense, Walter Callister, forwards, Buster Brown, Bob Shaw, Bill Lee, Frank Crummy, Neil Dillingham, Irwin Nixon.

Indications are that the next Musical Festival, to be held in Grande Prairie on April 17, is to take advantage at least as large as any previous year. According to the secretary, the amount of music ordered so far compares very favorably with other years at this time.

POETRY

"Ruin seize thee, ruthless King!
Confusion on thy banners wait; Tho' flann'd by Conquest's crimson wing, They mock the air with idle stain; Helm nor hauberk's twisted mail, Nor e'en thy virtues, Tyrant, shall Avert
To save thy secret soul from nightly Fears,
From Cambria's curse, from Cam-bria's tears!"
—Such were the sounds that o'er the crested pride
Of the first Edward scattered wild dun,
As down the steep of Snowdon's shaggy side He wound with tolling march his long array—Stout Glouster stood aghast in speechless trance;
To arms! cried Mortimer and couth'd his quivering lance.

On a rock, whose haughty brow Frowns o'er old Conway's foaming flood, Robed in the sable garb of woe With haggard eyes the Poet stood; (Loose his beard and hoary hair Stream'd like a meteor to the troubled air)
And with a master's hand and prophet's fire Struck the deep sorrows of his lyre—
A good writer will studiously avoid any suggestion of monotony.
Charles Dickens, as you know, ranks as one of the greatest novelists of all time, as well as one of the greatest students of human nature commenting on this idea in one of his books, says that the good writer will strive to inter-weave comedy and tragedy, humor and pathos, like the alternating lines of pink and white in a side of streaky bacon.
Tho' not professing to be a good writer, I can at least try to adhere to this rule as much as possible. With this in mind, therefore, we will leave the study of Homer for the present and consider Poetry from a totally different angle; the present setting being removed from Homer by the space of more than 2,000 years.
For the benefit of those who have not been following up these articles, let me repeat that their object is to inspire such a love and appreciation of good poetry as is bound to have a beneficial influence upon the writer at any standpoint whatsoever. A study of good poetry for instance, by the hard-headed business man will not detract from his virtue of shrewd business sense, but rather add to it by tempering it with a more human outlook. It will foster the growth of confidence in conversational giving a broader viewpoint. To everyone in whatever walk of life, it will bring fuller and more complete appreciation of life, and in developing of conscience, a happiness and "joie de vivre" beyond one's expectations.
To those few who may not have kept in mind the dictum laid down

In an earlier article to READ GOOD POETRY SLOWLY at all times, the meaning of the above lines may be a little obscure, not to say, probably meaningless; but do not give up. Be prepared to spend a little effort. The first lines in music, to the beginner, may seem difficult, but once having mastered them, we can laugh at their simplicity.

First of all, let us use a little sound common sense deduction. The above lines are from the pen of the King Edward, who, as you know, wrote the immortal "Elegy"—one of the most beautiful poems in our English language, and of which the great General Wolfe said: "I would rather be the author of that poem than capture Quebec tomorrow."

Can it be supposed that the same poet who wrote the beautiful "Elegy" should now stoop to writing meaningless nonsense?
Those of you who remember early English history will probably remember the story of the conquest of Wales by the first King Edward.
When that warlike figure, pursuing his triumphant way from one victorious success to another, was confronted with the task of subduing the Welsh, he came up against something outside and beyond his military understanding. All his bravery and strategy, and all the courage of his bravely followed soldiers, were of no avail against the ancient Britons' great proof of a fatalism, a dash and daring, and a belief in a power which whom, up to now, he had rather despised. What was the secret of their power? What was the spirit which urged them on to such deeds of valor? What caused them to hurl themselves fearlessly against the sword and lance of his own superior knights?
Would you believe it? It was simply Poetry.

The Welsh have been famous all through the ages for their spirit of nobility and song. This spirit was at its strongest in the days of Edward.
Word was brought to Edward that there were certain fierce, wild-looking men who chanted wild songs to the fighting men, accompanying them with stirring ballads, with weird and patriotic-inspiring music on the lyre, a kind of harp. These were called the Bard. As they were called at that time, these Bards were the poets of the Welsh. These fierce mountain fighters who, listening to the wild inspiring music, were driven to a frenzy. Woe betide the foe-men who should dare to come against them!

Now Edward, beside being foxy, as you know, was eminently practical.
Do you remember the Welsh saying when he had finally conquered them, expressed great dissatisfaction at the price of their own people.
"That will be perfectly okay," said Edward, "I will give you a prince who cannot speak a word of English."

Thereupon straightway appointed his own baby son, born in Caernarvon, to be their prince;—the first Prince of Wales, as you know.
Was that the kind of man to be stumped with a little problem like this?
"So, it's poetry that stands in our way, is it?" Hmm, let me see. Ha, I've got it! I've got it off the poets.
And this idea he proceeded to put into execution right away. He killed them all. Gram, all the names of them;—Cadwall, Urien, Morred, Taliesin. The rest was easy, as soon the conquest of Wales was an accomplished fact.

Did he kill them all?
No, according to the poet Gray, one was left—like the sole surviving rat or the little lamb left in the fold Piper of Hamelin; and it is this one surviving Bard whom Gray uses for the theme of his poem.
While Edward is leading his tired but victorious troops across Mount Snowdon, the weird figure of the Bard suddenly appears, calling down curses and imprecations on the conqueror who has so utterly and devastated his beloved country. The Bard, however, dying before the conqueror's vision of the future and can see and foretell all the dire calamities which are to happen to Edward and his successors.

He tells of the terrible fate awaiting the second Edward, that first Prince of Wales, in Berkeley Castle; of the treacherous Queen Isabella; of the Black Prince, dying before his father, and so on.
Let me now return to consider the first verse of the poem, and in order that it may be made still clearer to us, and without any idea of sacrifice on the beauty of the poem, employ a little paraphrasing. Expressed in common or garden language it would go something like this:

"Oh, Edward! you think you're sitting pretty, don't you? But if you only knew what I know, those big, strong, fierce-looking fellows settling in the breeze, would be prettily well dejected. And it's just too meaningless, but do not give up. Be prepared to spend a little effort. The
first lines in music, to the beginner,
may seem difficult, but once having
simplicity."

"Such sounds as these assailed the ears of King Edward I and his troops as he was leading them over difficult mountainous country. The Duke of Gloucester was speaking when he heard it, while Mortimer, thinking a

It is interesting that the inclusion of a small percentage of grass tested improved the yield of hay as compared with pure alfalfa, but when the grass was increased beyond a certain point the yield was depressed.
In all cases seven to eight pounds of alfalfa seed was sufficient to include it in a mixture with grass. Likewise, if too much grass seed was used in the mixture, the grass tended to have a depressing or smothering effect on the alfalfa.

The three mixtures which seemed best, based on the above, were: seven pounds alfalfa with one pound timothy or seven pounds alfalfa with three pounds timothy and three pounds brome grass.

There was little difference in the yield produced by these mixtures.

SPORTSMEN JOIN MORAL REARMAMENT MOVEMENT

LONDON, Feb. 20.—(By Cable)— Immediately before the kick-off in the Arsenal-Chelsea Association Football League match today four world famous sportsmen, addressing the 50,000 people present, sought to rouse Britain for Moral Rearmament.

In introducing Captain George Eyston, holder of the world's land speed record, Len Harvey, British heavyweight champion, and Bundell, Davis Cup player, George Allison, manager of the Arsenal Football team, said: "In only a little fellow of two hundred and twenty-five pounds, but I am throwing all my weight in with them. Moral Rearmament will make things better for us all."

"When I tried to make a speed record, I needed the whole beach to myself. Eyston took the crowd.
The trouble with most of us is that we think we are the only people on the beach. If everybody cared enough that everybody shared enough, there would be no accidents and no unemployment."

"The idea in boxing is to give as much as possible, and to get as little as possible. That is the basis of Moral Rearmament, too," was the way Len Harvey expressed it.

"So, if you have better conditions for all, it is up to us to do something about it. Moral Rearmament is something practical that we can all start doing today."

Harold Hanson, Norway's number one motorcycle champion, called to Captain Eyston: "We in the North promise you every support in your drive for Moral Rearmament throughout the world. We must first of all destroy the forces of destruction and those of construction."

Mixtures of Grasses and Legumes for Hay

(Experimental Farms News)

Mixtures of grasses and legumes have numerous advantages over either of these crops alone. They are usually more easily harvested and cured, are better adapted to the soil, and produce more nutritious and palatable feed.

The following are based on data obtained over a period of years from experiments conducted at the Northern Experimental Station, Lac-ombe. In these experiments all possible combinations from pure alfalfa to pure timothy, and mixtures of alfalfa with timothy, created wheat grass and brome grass were tested.

It is interesting that the inclusion
of a small percentage of grass tested

Rich Oil Resources In Pouce Coupe
District

By Edward R. Lovewell
(In Western Examiner)

Interest in the Pouce Coupe structure started with the discovery of large oil seepages along the Pouce Coupe River some years ago. It is related that when Dr. Baughman first visited the area he was taken to the locality of the seepages and holes were dug down two or three feet. The oil came up and filled the excavations with pools of light gravity oil, he exclaimed, "I do not need to see more than this to convince me."

The Pouce Coupe is an area of absorbing interest to every man with a vestige of common sense and a trace contributing to major oil accumulation. Take a map of the North American continent and trace the trend of the Rocky Mountains from Mexico north to the Arctic, and you will observe in three places where large scale enclaving deviations from their normal northwesterly-southeasterly course.

In two of these three areas the Mexican and West Texas oil fields have been discovered and developed into two of the greatest oil producing regions in the world. In the third area exists the great Pouce Coupe structure, which can be seen crossing the Pouce Coupe River. The B.C.
Alberta boundary. Pouce Coupe is the one known structure in northern Alberta where the thick oil-bearing sands of the lower Cretaceous formation are covered by a great thickness of impermeable shale (the St. John shale). In both test-wells drilled on the Pouce Coupe structure large flows of oil under strong pressure were encountered just beneath the impermeable covering of St. John shale, around 2,000 feet in depth. It has been said by competent authority that over one million dollars has been expended on geological investigations of Pouce Coupe area and vicinity.
These voluminous reports show three oil-bearing horizons are expected by the drill at comparatively shallow depths. These are: (1) Lower Cretaceous sands (full of oil residue at the Athabasca tar sands outcrop for 100 miles along the Athabasca River); (2) The Cretaceous Triassic limestone full of oil at the outcrop southwest of the Pouce Coupe; (3) The Devonian limestone (the producing horizon at Fort Norman and other areas in Alberta).

Dr. John A. Allan of the Research Council of Alberta, shown in his letter of Pouce Coupe structure that the Lower Cretaceous and Triassic horizons should be penetrated around 4,000 feet in depth and that the Devonian is immediately underneath. The question is, "What is the oil content of No. 1 test well in the Pouce Coupe? Is it a test well after passing through two oil sands at 850 and 2,320 feet. This company now has adequate financial resources to complete their test into the lower oil formation, expect a well brought in at Pouce Coupe that will show the value of the oil in the resources of the Pouce Coupe structure—and by this he means a large flowing well of crude oil from sands that can be drilled at low cost.

G. P. Red Devils Eliminate Hythe Maple Leafs

On Thursday night the Grande Prairie Red Devils eliminated Hythe Maple Leafs in the hockey tournament held in Grande Prairie last week by a score of 2 to 0.

The Red Devils got their two goals early in the first period. Turner and Wright counted. Neither team found the hemp during the balance of the game.

Hard checking marked the contest throughout. This prevented passing, which is the game of thrill.
While the game was hard-fought, the class of hockey served up was not good. The players having a tendency to bunch.

About five minutes before time Carson, the referee, called the goal-tender and sent all six men up.
However, the defense ward off the attack.

Maple Leafs—Goal, Roy Regnier; defense, Bob Pearson, Bob McKenzie, Tom Cunningham, Lee Hodgson, Forwards, Gus Toschak, Les Holmes, Regnier, Bill, Jack and Ed, Oak-ford.

Red Devils—Goal, Galt, Parrish; defense, Roy Regnier, Allan Wright, Turner, Law, Roy Wright, Edmundson, S. Warner and D. Spicer.

Richmond faced snow until 1938, when

Interesting News From Sexsmith

Vol. VII, No. 38

By R. A. MACLEOD March 7, 1939

Robert Wigmore Sexsmith Oldtimer Claimed By Death

Many Attend Funeral Services, Held In The United Church—Casket Covered With Flowers—Deceased, Who Was Well Liked, Was Generous To A Fault, And Will Be Greatly Missed In The Community.

In the passing of Robert Wigmore, whose death took place on Thursday last, Sexsmith lost another of her oldtimers.

Bob, as he was known to his many friends, was born on October 15, 1861, near Brocksburg, P.E.I., where he spent his boyhood days. When still a young man, he went to the eastern states, where he lived some time. In 1914 he came to the Peace River country and filed on a homestead immediately east of town, where he lived until the time of his death.

The funeral services were held in the United Church, with the Rev. E. Rands officiating. The pallbearers were: Messrs. Wm. McMillan, R. A. Baker, M. Omlawski and Jack Barr. The casket was covered with many floral offerings, sent by: Earl, Julia, Beulah and Bobbie; C. G. T. I.; Mr. Morgan and family; Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Alderton and family; Wm. and Robert Alexander; Ed. Moran; Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Foote; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Guthrie; Mr. and Mrs. Chester Miller and family; Mr. and Mrs. H. M. McMillan and family; Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Baker and family; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Weckley; Mr. and Mrs. A. Hays; Mr. and Mrs. John Barr; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Williamson and family; the Weckley family; and Miss Olive K. Arneberg.

The deceased loved to mount his loss, three sons—Fred of New York, Earl of Grande Prairie, and Leonard of Boston—also several grandchildren and a brother in Prince Edward Island.

Bob's familiar face will be missed here in town, as he was well liked, and generous to a fault with what little he had.

SEXSMITH HOCKEY TALENT

LOSE AT G. P. TOURNAMENT

Last week was not overly bright for the Sexsmith hockey talent. Of course, there was the win over the Hythe Maple Leafs, which put the Rangers into the final, with the Grande Prairie Red Devils. However, in the tournament the girls got trimmed to the tune of 2 to 6; junior boys' team went down 4 to 1; and the Rangers were wallowed by the All Stars 5 to 1.

Whilst we are on the subject of hockey, how is it that a cup put up for the championship of the Peace River country can be played for by a team made up from four different towns from the north side of the river? From listening to the game over the radio between the All Stars and the Grande Prairie Red Devils, it appeared to me that the R.D.'s had the better of the play throughout, and had a picked team from all the

LIVES UP TO HIS MOTTO

Sven Swenberg ran into bad roads and cold weather on his trip to Grande Prairie for freight last week. He was forced to divide his load and make an extra trip before he arrived back again. He lives up to his motto, "I will truck anything, and where, anytime," and his reputation for getting through remains as good as new.

GORDONDALE

SNOW-MELTERS' TASK LIGHTER

GORDONDALE, Feb. 28.—Without miniature chinooks the past week, the heavy fall of snow of two weeks ago is packing considerably and those in the snow-melting enterprise find it easy to get a barrel of water compared to the time it took when they first started.

SPRING FORECAST

By the talk of the whistlers-jacks who are gathering material with which to build their nests, and the moose, which are trucking up the hills, from where they disperse to the swamps and flats, we are due for a real change in the weather. Spring just around the corner. Another factor in favor of an early spring is the squirrel eating pine cones week ago, 75 per cent of which will be rejected, or to be more precise, graded as such, coming to their blackness, which is caused by the new spring coat starting to grow.

BENEFIT DANCE BRINGS IN SMALL SUM

What was hoped to be a financial success, the dance sponsored by the G.W.W. with which to remunerate the musicians and householder in whose home any and every important community gathering is held, was, we are sorry to say, "not so good," the sum of $3.75 only being collected.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. McKay, at Spirit River, a son, Magnus Jay, Mother and baby both doing fine and returned home February 28.

Mr. D. Menzies is at present confined to his bed with muscular rheumatism of the left hand and wrist. The inconvenience incapacitates him so much in regard to dressing that it was deemed advisable for him to stay in bed.

On February 28 school services were held in the diocese by Rev. Mr. McEwen and an announcement made by him, appointing the summer students of the Presbyterian faith is that they will enter the mission fields at the end of May and help is held out to us that once again Mr. R. W. T. Currie, who is held in the highest esteem in this district will be returned to us.

Bronchial colds and whooping coughs are on the wane fast here and it is hoped that these childhood maladies will give the parents a breather before the summer.

Squirrel season closes today, and the individual bags range from 200 to 1,000 by the hunters, none reporting over the 1,000. The besting record of Hector with 56 bagged in one day.

A 500-pound bomb, medium case, high explosive, was placed thirty feet from the shelters and then blew up under the same conditions as it dropped from an aircraft.

REFUGEES FROM SUDETEN

Large Number Left Czechoslovakia Recently For England—Some May Come To Peace River

Two hundred and fifty Sudeten German refugees have left Czechoslovakia for England, and many hundreds more are expected to leave for other countries. According to press dispatches at the beginning of this week, plans are being considered to place several hundred Sudeten German refugees in the Peace River country. Most of these refugees were members of the former German Social Democratic party, which opposed the party of Pro-Nazi Konrad Henlein before Germany annexed the Sudetenland last fall. The emigrants to the British Isles will be quartered in Scotland but later are to go to an English colony. Eighty refugees left for Sweden and 19 for Finland.

France rallied her African forces as Italy increased troops in Libya. Tunisia has been a sore spot for several weeks following Italian agitation for the French-controlled African area. These are the French colonial troops in Tunisia.
